Darnholm is a characterful stone building under a pantile rood. It is a listed building situated within the heart of Robin Hoods Bay.

I see there been no issue with the enlargement of the dormer to the south within the proposed dimension and the removal of the rooflight. But this is the extent the dormer can be enlarged without dominating the roofscape too much. The example of next door illustrated how wider dormers detract from the charter of the building when not constructed to historical proportions.

However, I do raise objections to the dormer to the north of the building. Dormers are a feature of the bay as identified within the Conservation Area Appraisal, however, historically theses appear to focus only on a single elevations, predominantly the south or west to get the most light and solar gain. To have dormers both sides of the roof would dramatically alter the profile of the roof in a way which is not consistent with preserving its special historical and architectural interest. I appreciate that next door has dormers to either side but these have no planning history. As next doors modern wide dormer is mentioned in the listed building description I can only determine that they were installed prior to listing. Such a development would not be supported now.

Should the applicant wish to revise the proposals to omit the dormer on the north I would be able to support this application, subject to a detailed condition of fenestration
