I support the application wholeheartedly. Although a local application, it benefits the wider UK. It helps farmers connect through the Flying Farmers Association and helps them support best agricultural practice. It promotes tourism for the area. It has been proved many times that General Aviation noise on remote grass strips is usually very limited and not intrusive. Initiatives like this application are good for wildlife diversity and countryside stewardship benefiting the nation as a whole. Lastly, it is a good use of the land retaining appearance and relevance in the countryside in the face of reducing agricultural revenues and commercial farming pressure to diversify away from agriculture.
