Background

Providence Heath is a grade II listed much altered former farmhouse which has been extended into former attached outbuildings located in a remote location some 4 kilometres south east of the Flask inn close by the A171 coast road.

It is accessed from a long and sloping driveway within landscaped gardens, a pond and new build rear outbuildings impart a residential character and appearance.

The site has a long planning history including enforcement action against unauthorised alterations and some relatively poor quality approved alterations.

The site has recently been purchased by the applicants who are looking for a range of external and internal alterations to create family accommodation. The application was the subject of pre-application advice and a number of the original ideas have been modified so as to have greater 'building conservation' focus.

In brief these include;

- Removal of later bulky front porch and replacement with simple timber porch,
- Replacement double glazed doors and windows with conservation detailing,
- Removal of some internal stoothing walls and ceiling in rebuilt part of the house to create an open plan living area with rooflight,
- Installation of an aga with rear roof flue,
- Minor internal wall and stair changes,
- Stoning up of a window aperture within a new build extension,
- Construction of a new 'catslide' rear porch in matching materials.

Main Issues

Core Policy G and Development Policy 5 of the NYM Core Strategy and Development policies document approved November 2008, between them seek to ensure that proposals to alter listed buildings are only permitted where they would not have an unacceptable impact on the special historic or architectural interest of the building.

The host building has been much altered over the years and some of the works have been relatively poor at retaining the intrinsic character of this former humble farmhouse.

This scheme retains the older intact part of the buildings layout whilst accepts changes to open up some heavily rebuilt parts of the house to create a mix of large and small internal room spaces. A later addition incongruous front porch is to be removed and replaced with a more delicate design together with a new well detailed rear porch. The current non-original single glazed doors and windows are to be replaced with double glazed units which would not be harmful.

The scheme has been the subject of detailed pre-application advice from the Authority's Conservation architect and there are no objections from them following internal consultation. Given minor works to one part of the roof void are proposed, a bat informative is recommended.

Contribution to Management Plan Objectives

Approval is considered likely to help meet Policy E5 which seeks to conserve the built heritage of the Park.
