Dear Sirs, I would like to add my support for this application. Our family has been regular visitors of Robin Hoods Bay for generations and the one area that it is lacking is the facilities at Robin Hoods Bay. Most places in the world have a beach café restaurant or ice cream place where one can sit and enjoy the view and watch the children play. Robin Hoods Bay seriously lacks this basic level of amenity. Whilst it is great to be stuck in the dark ages I don't feel that Robin Hoods Bay should be devoid of basic facilities like a tea room for sake of progress. Maybe we should turn off the electricity and the wifi and go back to oil lamps in search of preserving Robins Hood Bay like a museum. The comments received about a simple tea room are ludicrous and dramatic in the extreme. It feels like a personal vendetta has been launched against a business person who is trying to add some beneficial amenity to a small community who appear to be determined to be locked in the past. I think a place like Robin Hood Bay will benefit from sympathetic development otherwise all that happens is people have a nice walk down to the bottom of the hill and turn around and leave. Sympathetic developments like this encourage people to come and stay and use the other facilities Robin Hood Bay has to offer. It encourages people to stay in the holiday lets, it encourages people to shop in the gift shops and it therefore encourages active and productive employment. If the small community of Robin Hood bay can't accept mild changes like a wooden tea hut on the quarterdeck there is sends a signal to the whole of Yorkshire that the simple Northerners are not open for business, that we stuck in the past and that the little fishing town should have been left to fall into the sea. Come on, give up, its only a tea hut.
