My family has strong roots to Robin Hoods Bay and I have been a frequent visitor since birth. The entire charm of Bay is the walk down/up the hill and stopping in one of the numerous pubs, cafes or shop to pick up whatever snack or refreshment you would like. Each business has it's own individuality and have clearly had lots of thought and love put into them. Putting this hut next to the beach will pull all tourists and visitors away from all these wonderful places and slowly kill them off. This would be disastrous to RHB over time and I fear it will turn into just another one of those seaside tourist towns with no individual character.
